Telephone Standards

Forty years ago Alexander Graham Bell succeeded in transmitting the sound of the human voice over a wire; and while men scoffed at the invention and laughed the inventor to scorn Bell's imagination even then pictured the telephone in universal use.

His was the master mind, that penetrated the future and visualized an ideal—One System, One Policy, Universal Service.

Since then, time has developed certain standards—standards of plant construction, standards of equipment, standards of service efficiency.

Standards of our duty to the public have existed from the beginning of time; for they are founded on principles of equal justice and fair dealing. This means that our service must be as nearly perfect as human skill and ingenuity can make it, and that our rates must be fair, equitable, and as low as a fair return upon investment will permit.

It means courteous consideration of the public's needs, and solving the problems growing out of such needs in the light of the best engineering and other expert skill which the art of telephony has developed.

Such a policy commends itself to public favor, public respect and public confidence, without which no public utility can long exist.
